2008 Camp Faculty....

Sanna Valvanne –as Artistic Director of the north american choral company, Sanna expands the boundaries of voice, choirs, and individuals! Her innovative approach to each singer – The Creative Choral Method – Making Music Body & Soul – inspires everyone to experience and express music with their whole being. Sanna’s background and her unique method make her a sought after conductor around the world. A master teacher and fascinated student of world cultures, she believes in the boundless potential and creativity of young singers.

Patrick Johnson – as a performer, dancer, and teacher, Patrick has reached hundreds of thousands of people from all ages, from inner-city youth to world-renowned political leaders. He is a faculty member at Grand Rapids Community College’s Theater Department and works with local public schools helping to find new ways to educate through the arts. Patrick believes that dance educates and exposes learners to different cultures, which is crucial to our community’s development.

Brooks Filonow –Brooks has lived abroad for many years and has a great interest in the arts and crafts of other countries. She enjoys teaching and encouraging creativity in children and is experienced in many facets of the arts, including painting, fiber arts and doll making.

Mark Loring – is the Director of Music and Arts Ministries at First United Methodist Church. He oversees a multi-generational music ministries program along with Celebration, a juried sacred art show. He also serves as the primary organist for the church.

Mary Loring – has been a school music teacher and has worked in music and arts ministries with children and adults for the last 16 years.
